

Year 6 Comprehension 9: The Amazing Dream of Oliver

Once upon a time, in a cozy little town, there lived a boy named Oliver. Oliver was an adventurous child who loved exploring the woods, climbing trees, and imagining all sorts of magical worlds. But the best part of his day was bedtime because he always had the most amazing dreams.

One night, after snuggling under his blue starry blanket and saying goodnight to his stuffed bunny, Oliver closed his eyes and drifted off to sleep. As soon as he was in Dreamland, something incredible happened. He found himself standing in a place that looked like a giant playground made of candy!

The sky was a swirl of pink and purple, and cotton candy clouds floated by. There were gumdrop mountains and a chocolate river that sparkled like stars. Oliver felt something strange in his hands and looked down to see that he was wearing a shiny superhero suit with a big golden "O" on the chest.

"Wow! I must be a superhero!" Oliver exclaimed with excitement.

Just then, a little voice cried out from behind a giant lollipop tree. Oliver turned around and saw a tiny dragon with shimmering scales and big, teary eyes.

“Help! Help!” the dragon squeaked. “The Candy Castle is in trouble! The Ice Cream Monster has stolen all the rainbow sprinkles!”

Oliver’s eyes widened. Rainbow sprinkles were everyone’s favorite treat, and without them, the Candy Castle would be sad and dull.

“Don’t worry,” Oliver said bravely. “I’ll help you!”

With a swish of his hand, Oliver discovered that he had magical powers. He could fly, shoot sparkles from his fingers, and even make things appear and disappear! He zoomed through the air, soaring over the candy mountains and the chocolate river.

As he flew closer to the Candy Castle, he saw the Ice Cream Monster sitting on a big, fluffy cloud, surrounded by heaps of rainbow sprinkles. The monster had a huge, gooey smile and was munching on the sprinkles like they were popcorn.

“Hey, you!” Oliver shouted, trying to sound as strong as he could. “You have to return those sprinkles! They belong to everyone in Candyland!”

The Ice Cream Monster looked up with a surprised expression. “Oh, I didn’t know! I just thought they were for me because I’m so sweet!”

Oliver’s heart softened. “Well, everyone deserves to enjoy the sprinkles. Let’s share them!”

The Ice Cream Monster nodded and began to gather the sprinkles. Oliver used his magic to help organize them into big, sparkling piles. Soon, the sprinkles were back where they belonged, decorating the Candy Castle and making everything look beautiful and colorful again.

The tiny dragon fluttered around, clapping its tiny claws in delight. “Thank you, thank you! You saved the Candy Castle!”

As a reward, the Candy Queen, who was made of sparkling sugar crystals, gave Oliver a shiny golden lollipop. “This is for you, brave hero. It will remind you of the wonderful adventure you had here.”

Oliver took the lollipop with a smile and said goodbye to the dragon, the Ice Cream Monster, and the Candy Queen. He flew back to his cozy bed, the magical world of candy fading behind him.

When Oliver woke up the next morning, he found a real lollipop on his bedside table. It was just like the one the Candy Queen had given him in his dream! He smiled and remembered the magical adventure with fondness.

Every night after that, Oliver looked forward to his dreams with excitement, wondering what amazing adventures awaited him next. And even though he knew it was just a dream, he felt happy knowing that in his dreams, he could be a superhero and help make the world a sweeter place.

And so, Oliver continued to explore his dreams, always ready for another magical adventure, with his superhero suit and a heart full of courage and kindness.

The End.
